

I think if you're looking for something with friendship, bravery and adventure, then this is definitely the book for you!

Five children live in a cold, rat filled orphanage. One day, Milou mysteriously finds a name and some coordinates on her puppet's foot. Milou and her friends decide to run away from the orphanage and the evil Matron (Gasbeek) and Merchant. They follow the coordinates which leads them into danger and a life changing adventure. Read the book to find out what happens, and much much more!

My favourite part of the story was how suddenly everything makes sense at the end. One moment, nothing made sense, then everything makes sense the next moment!

I think the author built up suspension really well! She was also very (VERY) good at showing not telling.

I liked this book a lot! If you're a good reader, (like myself, not to brag) then you would probably get most of the messages. The most important one is, if you have dreams, you should always try to accomplish them!

I hope you liked this review.

PS, if Hana Tooke is reading this, I really really liked your book.
